Oman Air has invited its staff to apply for the airline's assistance in performing this year's Hajj. The move by the national carrier of the Sultanate of Oman is recognition of the enormous commitment its staff have shown in achieving Oman Air's exceptional levels of service.

Sheik Ahmed Al Nabhani, Oman Air's Chief Officer, Support Services, said:

"We are delighted to be inviting a group of our employees to visit the Holy city of Mecca and to perform Hajj for the Hijri year 1431. The invitation reflects our appreciation of the extraordinary efforts Oman Air's staff have made to serving the company and the nation. Their hard work and dedication have helped Oman Air make remarkable progress and we feel that it is important that we recognise the vital contribution made by all our people."

He added that Oman Air was determined to ensure that the standards of recognition and incentives offered to staff matched those of the airline's highly acclaimed air and ground services.

"Oman Air's employees are some of its greatest assets and, on behalf of the airline's management, I would like to extend our sincere thanks to Oman Air's distinguished board members for their unlimited support and continued care for the company and all its staff."
